

F131 HELLCAT COMBAT £62K

(ABOVE) Confederates are the tough guys of the motorcycling world. They make Suzukis shake, Kawasakis cower and Harley Davidsons go crying to their mummies. Just take the latest F131 Hellcat Combat: even its name sounds more like it should be on the frontline of Beelzebub's armoured corps than dawdling down the B4053 in Bristol. Its rugged skeletal features give way to an immense powerplant beneath: 150bhp, thanks very much. So, that would be more power than a BMW 3-series in between your legs. Now, that is scary. With a limited run of 150, and a price tag of £70,000 you'll be part of a pretty exclusive owners club, too, along with other like-minded individuals such as The Terminator and Judge Dredd. confederate.com

WESTLEY RICHARDS £29,500+

(RIGHT) Fancy pointing two barrels in the face of economic adversity? This detachable lock model from Westley Richards should probably do the trick. Prices start at just under £30k. But for a full-spec double rifle with exhibition engraving, elephant skin case and exhibition grade wood, expect to pay at least £80k. westleyrichards.co.uk
